This course aims to provide students to a graduate-level familiarity with contemporary political philosophy. We will begin with an introduction to the Rawlsian liberal political tradition and some of its detractors, with a special focus on the role of the “basic structure” in Rawlsian political theory. Within this discussion, we will also consider the debate between ideal and non-ideal theory, a thread that will continue throughout the semester. The second part of the class will explore difficult questions regarding how collective action – both coordinated and uncoordinated – contributes to (in)justice, including the nature of complicity, what it means to contribute to injustice, and how responsibility for (in)justice should be distributed. The final third of the class will be focused on the structural nature of racial injustice and potential causes and remedies of these defects in the basic structure.

Required Texts

Required course readings will be made available electronically the Wednesday before each class meeting. Course readings will draw heavily from the following books:

Course Requirements

Short Response Pieces – 20% - 6 short response pieces, with the lowest grade dropped. No longer than 3 double-spaced pages, the goal of the response piece is not expository but analytical. Argue for a thesis, raise an objection, or clarify a point that you think is important and interesting. Short response pieces are due no later than 8am on the day of class, and may (will) be used during class discussion. Each student must turn in at least one response piece during each of the months Jan, Feb, Mar, and Apr.

Conference Paper & In-Class Presentation – 25% - A conference-length (~3000 words) paper which you will present in class on a week of your choosing. Papers must be distributed to all members of the group no later than 8pm the night before your presentation. Students are expected to read each other’s papers and come to class ready to give constructive feedback.

Conference Paper Re-Write – 35% - A revision of your presented paper in light of our discussion on your presentation day and my comments. All students will have at least two weeks to complete their revisions.
In-Class Participation – 20% - Please complete all readings before class & come to class prepared to contribute to discussion. In particular, be prepared to explain the major theses of assigned readings, the arguments for those theses, and to critically evaluate those arguments. Each week, one participant will be responsible for leading our discussion by providing a critical précis of the reading and raising a few interesting points for discussion.

Class Policies
Late short response pieces are not accepted. Late papers will be penalized half a letter grade (5 points) for every day or portion of a day that they are late. In this class there is a zero-tolerance policy for cheating: any student found to have plagiarized on any assignment will receive a failing grade for the entire course, and all available institutional penalties will be sought.
