Articles Describing Archives and Manuscript Collections in the United States

An Annotated Bibliography

Compiled by
Donald L. DeWitt

Bibliographies and Indexes in Library and Information Science, Number 11

GREENWOOD PRESS
Westport, Connecticut • London
Contents

Introduction ix

General Collections

Archives and Manuscripts 1
Maps, Oral Histories, and Photographs 6

Business Collections

General 19
Agriculture and Forestry 30
Manufacturing 37
Maritime Industries 38
Organized Labor 40
Transportation 49

Ethnic Minorities and Women

General 53
Afro-Americans 55
American Indians 61
Europeans 68
Jews 70
Women 72

Federal Archives

General 79
Library of Congress 82
National Archives 85

Fine Arts Collections

General 101
Art 105
Drama, Theatre, Motion Pictures 111
Music 119
Afro-Americans

This Afro-American author's collection includes thirty-one feet of diaries, correspondence, photographs, sound recordings, manuscripts of his writings, and published materials. Abbott and Van Mol provide detailed descriptions of each record series in the collection.

The author cites many collections in the Trevor Arnett Library. Description is limited to collection titles with occasional scope and content notes and comments on research values.

The author provides an overview of this rich resource that contains clipping files; sound recordings; manuscript collections; motion pictures; archives; and photographs.

An analysis of data in interviews of former slaves gathered by the WPA's Federal Writers Project in the 1930s. Most of the narratives are in the Library of Congress, but the article also cites those in the Oklahoma Historical Society.

Boles cites manuscript collections in the Maryland Historical Society by collection title and content notes under the headings plantation accounts; slaves and slavery; Africa and colonization; abolitionists; freedmen; the Civil War; and post-Civil War.

This is an overview of a collection assembled by Carl Van Vechten. Its purpose was to portray Afro-American life in the 20th century through books and unpublished materials. Bontemps mentions some manuscripts and photographs in the collection, but not in detail.
An administrative history precedes the inventory. Record series, inclusive dates, volume, and content notes appear under each U.S. legation in Liberia, Senegal, Sierra Leone, Gold Coast, Gambia, and Nigeria.

   The author reviews record groups and record series in the U.S. National Archives documenting economic and commercial relations; agriculture; trade and tariffs; immigration; and military affairs.

   The records described in this article date from the creation of the War Department General Staff in 1901 through 1919. Bethel comments specifically on three major sub-groups: General Staff records, Army War College records, and Board of Ordnance and Fortification records.

   The author provides a checklist of papers by record group with annotated folder titles. The annotations identify subjects treated or correspondents' names and inclusive dates.

   The authors review the topical content of civilian letters written to federal officials and agencies during WWII and explain how to locate these letters in the National Archives.

   Bunce cites record groups, with inclusive dates, that contain rich materials for genealogists. Most appear to be microfilmed records.

   Records of the U.S. courts; Bureau of Indian Affairs; Corps of Engineers; and U.S. censuses are the principal record groups that the authors describe. They mention, with less detail, records of other federal agencies and the branch's microfilm holdings.

   A historical report on a project to copy German, French, and British